 The sacred Muse my Fancy to inspire,
 I whom the Papiſts call th' infernal Liar?
 Yet why not I? Alas I neither want
 Their Blessing, nor fear I their cursed Rant;
 For know, my Muse is truly Protestant.

10 February hath XXVIII Days,

Joyful I write where GEORGE protects my Pen;
Great GEORGE, the Man of God, the King of Men.
Joyful I write, where Liberty thought meet
To fix her Standard; Britain is the Seat
Of Liberty; this Tyranny must own;
And shall while royal GEORGE protects the Throne.

For all these inestimable blessings, let us with fervent devotion, and hearts and hands lifted up to the Eternal Jehovah, the great giver of every good and perfect gift — say, Non nobis Domine, sed nomini tuo da gloriam.

Justice come forth; and straight perform thy Task,
 For know, 'tis all we wish, and all we ask.
 Alas! Kings are but made of Flesh and Blood,
 Come then and weigh the Bad against the Good;
 And what shall be thy honest punctual Word,
 Let sacred Truth and History record.

Women have 1 kewise Failings;—very true,
 Come then and weigh the royal CHARLOTTE too.
 Great CHARLOTTE shall undaunted scorn to flinch,
 Nor from thy honest Standard start an Inch;
 Her princely Virtues in the Scale when hurl'd,
 Would surely kick the Beam 'gainst all the World.

 Now seek we next the Reason to explore.

 Themselves against a tender Parent turn?
 Ungratefully returning Ill for Good;
 First suck her Mother's Milk, and then her Blood.

1			*				3 9	3a12	11a57	We yet seem not very well satisfied, and to speak truth, never (I fear) shall, so long as party prevails.—This is a truth, which we cannot call upon the celestial messengers to vindicate! Reason and sage experience have already confirmed it, in the breast of every sensible man, that whilst what delights the one, distracts the other. Confusion and disturbance must inevitably follow; and peace and harmony, love and unity flee away. To say that this is the case with other nations, is spreading the wound instead of healing it; and it is but a surly satisfaction to say, I thank God my case is not so bad, but I see as much calamity in that of my neighbour.

Whence all these bitter jars; these clam'rous tongues,
 Proclaiming wrongs for rights, and rights from
 Which only serve to overturn a state, [wrongs,
 Disturb, confound, and darken each debate;
 Oh whence?—Hell open thy tremendous jaws;
 Thine was the work, 'tis thine to tell the cause.

Yes says damn'd Discord : I myself found out
Two single words ; and all the Rabble Rout,
Of my abode that through malignaut hell,
In liquid burnings, or on dry do dwell,
Shall to my endless fame rehearse the story ;
'Twas I found out the names of Whig and Tory.

1						3 23	4 a 35	10 a 31	It was a just and wise reply of the prophet Daniel, to the once great monarch Nebuchadnezzar, when he inquired of him, whether he was able to tell him his dream, with the interpretation thereof: his answer (which for the amusement of some of my readers, as well as for the instruction of all, I shall give, as I find it in the first English translation of our holy Bible), was modest yet bold, humble without meanness, sincere and honest without flattery or servility.

The fools thus parted into high and low church,
Still squabbled on, till they became of no church.
Now ins and outs you see is all the play;
But win who will, your country's sure to pay.
'Tis this disturbs your royal Monarch's breast,
And robs a lovely pair of quiet rest.

Justice now hold thy honest balance forth,
 And 'gainst their frailties weigh their royal worth.
 Stern justice owns that in the glaring light
 Of Truth and Goodness those all vanish quite.
 So when bright Sol shoots out his brilliant blaze,
 The pigmy stars hide their diminish'd rays.

When Mary in the cause of Rome engag'd,
 And persecution through the nation rag'd:
 When spite of hell and popery our fires,
 For Truths high cause expir'd in Smithfield fires;
 How happy then had our forefathers been,
 If blest'd with such a King, and such a Queen.

A		Δ	□	*	Δ	10 27	7a 4	11a 15	The devil himself well knew God's manifestation of himself, and his almighty Power, by this means; and has with all the sagacity of an arch fiend, endeavoured that the deluded sons of fallen Adam shall, by enchantments and divinations of various kinds, of which ancient history gives an ample account, by leaving the true God, ask counsel of him. And too well he has often succeeded. Yet even in this he has full often shot beyond his mark: and he to whom all hidden things belongeth, has often forced his oracles to speak what their grand master would for his own credit have wished to have been a secret; but the dragon is bound, and his power limited.

Then since wild faction hath our state disjoint,
 To former days let faithful hist'ry point;
 And in the interregnum read and know,
 Whate'er the Cause, the sure effect is woe.
 Be warn'd by jarring discords prov'd before,
 And pray to God such times may come no more.

Britons unite, the muse repeats once more,
 Oh waft the found ye winds to ev'ry shore:
 Tell it to crowded towns and rustic plains;
 While Royal George and lovely Charlotte reigns,
 Our rights are safe, and Britons, if they will
 In one unite, may all be happy still.

Of the ECLIPSES that will happen in the Year 1786.

TWICE will the silver Moon, the mother of months, and soft empress of the night, lose her borrowed lustre. Thrice will the blazing charioteer of day withdraw his flaming beams for a while from the gazing spectator.

Within the rolling year shall five Eclipses be,
Yet who inhabit here, not one of them shall see.

The first will be an invisible eclipse of the Moon on January 14, as follows:

Beginning about 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ Mane.

Middle about 12 $\frac{3}{4}$ Noon.

End almost - 2 P. M.

But the Moon does not rise with us till after the eclipse is over.

The second is an eclipse of the Sun, on the 30th of January, at about 40 minutes past 2 in the morn, and consequently to us invisible; but to those who are in 134 deg. East longitude, and 32 deg. North latitude, he will be centrally eclipsed.

The third will be a total eclipse of the Moon, as follows,

Beginning 8 h. 56 m. Mane, July 11th.

Beginning of total darkness, 10h. 21m.

Middle of the eclipse, - 10h. 40m.

End of total darkness - - 11h. 0m.

End of the eclipse - - - 12h. 24m.

To the inhabitants of the British isle it will however be invisible.

The fourth is an invisible eclipse of the Sun, on July 25, near a quarter before 9 in the morning; he will however be centrally eclipsed in 42 deg. East longitude, and 43 deg. South latitude.

The fifth and last will be an eclipse of the Sun, on Wednesday, the 20th day of December, at above 3 quarters past 4 in the evening, and therefore to us not visible.

There will be also a transit of the planet Mercury over the face of the Sun, on the morning of the 4th of May, as follows:

Beginning 15 min. past 2 morning.

Middle - 57 min. past 4

End - 38 min. past 7.

Observations upon the probable Events during the four Quarters of the present Year, and first,

THE WINTER QUARTER.

WHICH commenced on the 21st of December, 1785,
at 3 quarters past 8 in the morning,

When Sol to Capricorn pursued his way,
And dark'ning clouds almost obscure the day;
When snowy fleeces clothe the naked wood,
And freezing winds benumb the rapid flood;
The mighty torrent rages now no more,
But lays his stiff'ned arms beside the shore.

To the curious and more intelligent I will give the scheme of the heavens, at the Sun's first ingress into Capricorn; we have Luna in the earthy and temperate Virgo, and here she hath her fall. The nimble Mercury is posited in 19 deg. of the melancholy Capricorn, and herein he hath neither exaltation, detriment, nor fall. Venus in Sagittary is under the same predicament. The fiery Mars is retrograde in the 30th deg. of Taurus, wherein he has his detriment. Jupiter in the 6th deg. of the fiery Aries, where he has neither dignity nor detriment. And Saturn in the same condition in Aquarius. And, now learned reader, judge for yourself.

What I have to add in this quarter is, that my observations on the close of the preceding year may still continue applicable; viz. much business stirring in the cabinet; preparations against hostile designs much talked of; among the lower sort much wonder and strange things whispered; and, as is the natural consequence, stranger events expected. In relation to what effects this season will have upon the human body; true it is, the cold, moist, and decrepid age and state of man is most consonant to this quarter. Hence age suffers most, and youth is most healthful. But age, matured by experience, may spin out life, while youth, unguarded, lays a foundation for sudden death.

OF THE SPRING QUARTER,

WHICH this year commences on the 20th day of March, at 29 minutes past 10 in the morning, when that glorious luminary the Sun once more deigns to dispense equal day and night, now once more touching upon the cœlestial Aries. The position of the heavens at this juncture will appear from the following scheme:

In this position of the heavens, wherein 9 deg. of Scorpio ascend, and 5 deg. of Pisces culminate, together with the various aspects of the present quarter, I think we may venture to predict a very active time. We live in a day when old states are dismembering, and new ones arising. Much faction is in many parts, and they who have read the history of ancient times will find, that what has been will be, and there is no new thing under the sun. Empires of old are now become void, and the history of their heroes and transactions appear to us as entirely fabulous. But many will say this cannot be the case with us in this day, because that their religion was a false one, and therefore, as all national politics are founded upon the religion of their country, their religion being a false foundation, their

their structure could not endure for ages. But we Christians, whose foundations are laid in the sure promises of the gospel of truth, have greater hopes and higher expectations from him who has said, I o! I will be with you always. But absolutely this is either bad logic, or no logic at all. For in the first place, although religion is pretended to be the basis of all laws, yet it never appeared to me that it was so; certain it is, that some pretension of that kind has at times gilded a any a bitter pill.—Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live, was a scripture sentence, which a century or two ago gave sanction to a law by which a harmless but helpless old woman, when she could do no more good, might be the more cruelly, because legally, deprived of life, to the great joy and satisfaction of all the good Christians, who kindly stood muttering their maledictions during her painful exit. Again, let us examine the game laws, and being no sportsman myself, I claim a greater right to speak to them. Those beasts of chase which are confined to the parks of gentlemen, are certainly as much their property as the lands they feed upon; but those who are free-booters upon every one, are certainly the property of every one who can secure them. I only say this, to prove that not every law is founded upon gospel; nor will I say that in this case our lawgivers ever went to the gospel-mongers for a text. But one swallow makes no summer; and it may probably be said, that religion certainly is the first establisher of laws, and at all times the grand support of them. I acknowledge it, and must own that I sincerely believe it; and was I to make a fresh article of faith it would be a very short one, and worded I think in this manner:—No God, no faith—no faith, no government—no government, no laws—and no laws, no living. Yet in any country I must needs say, that although the laws of the country should be built entirely upon the divine code, yet if that be erroneous, the other must be so likewise. Moreover, ancient custom is so predominant over the populace, that prudence itself will wink at it; and I think I have excellent authority to back my assertion, when I call to mind the saying of St. Paul: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means win some. But I must remind you, that when I speak of the divine code, I only mean that code of religious laws and

and tenets which are supposed to be the rules of particular sects of Christians, through the reformed world. Let us look into the Greek church, and see what laws produced from their religion would bring for the good of mankind. All is not gold that glitters; nor is, in my opinion, their dissent from the Romish church, a jot better than popery. For a proof of this, I will give you an extract from the History of the Travels of the Ambassadors from the Duke of Holstein, into Muscovy, &c.

In speaking upon their modes and religious customs, he observes thus: "Their burials, like their other public actions, are performed with great ceremony; for the soul of the sick person is no sooner departed, than the widow sends for their kindred and friends, who standing round the deceased, ask him a number of silly and impertinent questions, as, Why did he die? What had affronted him? &c. &c. Many more such fooleries pass between his death and interment. But I pass over these, and only tell you that at the last, when he is taken to his grave in order to sleep with his forefathers, the priest then takes a paper, which is a kind of ticket for his admission into Paradise, and which being signed by the patriarch, or metropolitan of the place, and the confessor, is sold for more or less, according to the abilities of the purchaser."—This ticket is of so extraordinary a nature, that the reader will not be displeased at our inserting it at length from so good authority:

"We whose names are hereunto subscribed, the Patriarch, or Metropolitan, and Priest of the city of N——, do make known and certify by these presents, that the bearer of these our letters has always lived among us like a good Christian, professing the Greek religion; and though he hath committed some few sins, yet he hath confessed the same, and thereupon hath received the communion for the remission of his sins; that he hath honoured God and his saints; that he hath said his prayers, and that he hath fasted on the hours and days appointed by the church, and that he hath carried himself so well towards me, who am his confessor, that I have no reason to complain of him, or to deny him absolution.

"In witness of this we have given him our present testimonial, to the end that upon sight thereof, St. Peter may open unto him the gate of eternal bliss."

The coffin is then shut and put into the grave, the face being turned to the East, while those who return to the late house of mourning now drown their sorrows in liquor.

Now what good laws or pious documents can be expected from so impure a fountain as this? Again, let us look into the part of the Christian world which is under the direction of the church of Rome; and here, to do impartial justice, I will give them fairly the words of one of their best and most learned champions:

“Fides Catholica docet omnem virtutem esse bonam, omne vitium esse malum. Si autem erraret Papa, præcipiendo vitia vel prohibendo virtutes, teneretur ecclesia credere vitia esse bona, et virtutes malas, nisi vellet contra conscientia peccare.”

Bellarmino de Pontifice Romano, lib. 4, c. 5.

That my plain Protestant reader may not be at a loss, through ignorance of the Latin language, I will give the above a fair English translation.

Bellarmino, in the 5th chapter of the 4th book of the forementioned book, says thus:—“The Catholic faith teaches us, that although every virtue is good, and every vice evil, yet if the Pope should so far err as to command vices, and prohibit virtues, the church is bound to believe the vices to be good, and the virtues evil, unless he would sin against conscience.”

The great, sensible, and learned Dr. South, in his observations upon these words, has this pertinent remark:

“Good God! (said he) that any thing that wears the name of a Christian, or but of a man, should venture to own such a villainous, impudent, and blasphemous assertion in the face of the world as this. What! must murder, adultery, theft, fraud, extortion, perjury, drunkenness, and all the horrible train of diabolical exercises, pass for good and commendable actions, and fit to be practised? And mercy, chastity, truth, justice, temperance, and sincere dealing, be accounted things utterly evil and immoral, and not to be followed by men, in case the Pope, who is generally a weak, and almost always a wicked man, should by his mistake and infallible ignorance, command the former and forbid the latter?

“Did

“ Did Christ himself ever assume such a power, as to alter the morality of actions, and to transform vice into virtue, or virtue into vice, by his bare word? Certainly never did a grosser paradox, or a more wicked sentence, drop from the mouth or pen of any mortal man, since reason or religion had any being in the world.

“ And I must confess, I have often with great amazement wondered how it could possibly come from a person of so great reputation, both for learning and virtue too, as the world allows Bellarmine to have been. But when men give themselves over to the defence of wicked interests, and false propositions, it is but just with God to smite the greatest abilities with the greatest insatiation.” — Thus far the learned and ingenious Dr. South.

We may methinks now plainly discover, that true religion is much misused, even to the scandal of Christianity. Upon such principles as I have been mentioning, what code of human laws could be produced, which might be said to be established upon the everlasting foundations of gospel truths. May we, who sit out of the shadow of darkness, and enjoy the true light of the gospel, with hands and hearts lifted up to heaven, bless the giver of every good and perfect gift, that the lines are fallen to us in pleasant places; yea, we have a goodly heritage. Again, we may hence learn that many modes of faith were not founded upon scripture, but were the offspring of the human brain; and then the scriptures were ransacked, and often misinterpreted for texts to maintain them. This is another blessing that we Protestants enjoy, that every man may read and judge his own way. And supposing the worst, viz. that (as the Papists affirm) every heretic is certainly damned; yet the devil has possessed that Papist certainly, who will not give a poor Protestant leave to go to hell his own way; which the horrible Inquisition, and the fire and faggots, together with the dire massacres of former ages, plainly prove they will not admit of. Lastly, Hence every Protestant may learn, that not every nation who professes the Christian religion follows the true Christian practice; from whence come strifes and dissensions? have we not all one faith, one hope, one baptism, one God and Father of us all? — It comes from this; we lust, and have have not; nor are we ever easy but when we are, for the sake of interest, destroying one another.

But I proceed to the other two quarters, in which I shall be extremely brief.

THE SUMMER QUARTER.

THIS quarter begins at what time the Sun enters the tropical sign Cancer, which this year commences on June the 21st, at 8 h. $\frac{1}{2}$ in the morning. By all appearance, if we may be allowed to peep behind the curtain, and give a modest conjecture, this will be a busy quarter.—French counsels, Dutch honesty, and Hibernian policy, are matters not much to be depended upon; distractions in councils of a free people are nothing new; witness the history of ancient Rome, or indeed the annals of our own nation. But I yet hope that the peaceable well-wishers to the British constitution, may look forward with satisfaction; and those who have nothing else to hope for, let them hope for a good harvest.

THE AUTUMNAL QUARTER.

THIS quarter commences on the 22d day of September, at 10 in the evening, when the Sun entering upon Libra, reduces days and nights again to an equality. By the position of the heavens at this time, it still appears to me that the year will continue in hurry and perplexity, and possibly, when it expires, leave the new one sole heir to a wide scene of confusion. If a revolt should be ripening in Spanish America, I should not much wonder; but when it will take place, time, and not I, must determine. I heartily wish our harvest plenteous, and well got in. Complaints in some parts I am well aware of, but I hope not in general. May the labours of the seafaring be crowned with success. Gladly would I promise happiness to every state of human existence, but prudence says, promise with caution.

And now, my good friends, the next page puts a period to my this year's performance; in which, if you was to find any wit, I should be sorry for it. I profess it not my

my talent; and if it was, I would make it an exile here, as this is designed, from the bottom of my heart, as a sober, solemn, and, to the best of my small abilities, sensible account of what I really believed, in my contemplations on the vicissitudes of the present year. Those who are dissatisfied that the prognostics are not more full and pointed, let them know, that under seven planets, and twelve signs, are all the cities, countries, and states in the universe; and when the Astrologer, although backed by all the rules of his art, may predict an accident which certainly shall and does happen; yet I have often found it, to the truth as well as discredit of Astrology, that while the Astrologer's presumption has marked out one place, the finger of God has pointed out another, and time has proved the event.

For this reason I would rather be cautious than loquacious. It was well said of one of the ancients, Sæpius revolve, quod semel evolveris, et verba cadent in sententias: Think twice before you speak once, and you will speak twice the better for it. Let us therefore conclude with a fervent prayer to him by whom kings reign, and princes decree wisdom, to pour forth his blessings upon our dread Sovereign and all the royal family; beseeching him, that there may never be wanting one of that royal and truly Protestant line to sway the British scepter. And may he, who rules the stars, make us holy here, in order that we may be happy hereafter; and to him be ascribed, as is most due, all honour, glory, dominion, and praise, henceforth and for evermore. Amen.
